

The Role and Role of Fairy Tales in Child Rearing

Durdona Mahmudova

Pre-School Educational Institutions retraining Of Managers, Specialists and Their Training Institute Independent Researcher
Tashkent, Uzbekistan

Abstract – The model of pedagogical improvement in preschool educational establishments has been improved on the basis of integration and reflexive integration of the components of moral and educational activities (target-content, organizational-methodological, control-rating) with spheres of development. (Intellectual-creative, know-how, socio-emotional, communicative and physical).

Keywords – Upbringing, Family, Father, Folklore, Fairy-Tale.

One of the richest and most diverse genres in folklore poetry is a fairy tale. The fairy-tale is also remarkable for its livelihood, its aspirations, its hard work, its location and its ultimate ideals.

Created by folk genius, fairy tales have a powerful effect on the upbringing of the younger generation and stimulate a spiritual feeling. The fairy tales have also provided spiritual nourishment for a man by means of his power, his rights, his freedom, his courage and love for his country.

We recommend that you read and listen to fairy tales as follows:

- Reading fairy tales for preschool children;
- Recommended fairy tales for school-age children;
- Recommended fairy tales for middle and high school kids.

The size of the fairy tale recommended for young children is simple. As we mentioned earlier, children of this age still do not know what the universe is. Therefore, the fairy tales that they recommend should be about nature, wildlife, friendships, working people, communities, and morals. The children of this time are "Flies", "Jealous dog", "Owl with the ostrich", "Boar rabbit", "Honest child", "Fury of the bees", "Turnip with a fox", "Turnip», „It is useful to read fairy tales, such as" Gambling ", " Gift of pigeons».

One of the most important tasks for parents and teachers of preschools is to bring up children in a love of work. A child should be taught to work from an early age, to give him a job at an early age and to adapt to work. Even though the job assigned to him is unimportant, even deserving of a "job," the result is important. As a result, the child develops such qualities as love, hard work, and diligence.

When a child goes to kindergarten it is important to understand that life is hard to live without. Let the child work freely and be responsible for his or her mistakes. Let the young soul understand the results of its work, and be accustomed to thinking, doing, and motivating. However, the child does not appear at once and develops gradually. You need to start with the right kind of education, early in your family, in kindergarten. When a child gets a job experience, he or she will simply wait until their parents show up. The emphasis on job training and training is the habit of doing everything on time. Being accustomed to work and doing it on time is important in upbringing. When things are not done in a timely manner, a lot of work is done, superficial, poor quality, and a lot of work.

Therefore, it is necessary to do everything with due diligence and timeliness. Because all living things in the world move, strive and achieve what they need in life. Even the bees, the ants, and the birds work tirelessly to feed the winter.

It is good to read and tell a fairy tale, as well as the tireless, hardworking ants, as well as the "Kumurs" of the people.

This is what life is like: if you work hard with your business, you will live a healthy, prosperous life and live without suffering. Kumur does not boast, it is simple and simple. It has these qualities. In questions and answers, ice, cloud, sun, rain, earth, grass, cattle, wolves, snipers and mice outweigh the ants.

Most of the fairy tales recommended for children of this age are works that reflect ideas of honesty, honesty, and honesty. Take, for example, the Turkmen folk fairy tale "The Truthful Boy." The fairy-tale heroine's admiration for the younger reader will impress the young reader.

The Russian folk tale "Turnip" is at the forefront of children's books during this period. The fairy tale is very simple and simple, but its meaning and content are very strong.

The fairy-tale tells the story of the grandfather sowing turnips and the multiplication of large turnips. There is almost no detail. But there are many lessons to be learned from it. In the fairy tale, the grandfather's hard work is evident. Grandpa works day and night turnip and works hard. So in fairy tales, first and foremost, hard work is glorified. Second, the child should grow up to be friendly and friendly with those around him. Those who grow up with friends, with the community, and with each other, are good for themselves and others. The story of pulling a big turtle in the fairy tale from the ground is very interesting for a young reader. Grandparents, grandchildren, puppies, cats, mice all work together. This condition gives the children great pleasure. In fairy tales, power helps to form the concept of unity.

The third aspect of the fairy tale is that it encourages preschoolers to love nature, to protect and care for animals. Babies feel the need to feed and care for puppies, cats and even mice.

Children of this age are very interested in learning about such qualities as friendship and friendship between animals. In the animal world, the friendliness and care of a friend is bestowed through fairy tales such as "The Lion and the Dog", "The Goat, the Sheep and the Wolves". In the "Ostrich and the Tiger" fairy tale, the idea of helping each other, especially in the midst of a disaster, lies in the heart of animals.

By the way, preschoolers are enriched with their spirituality by getting to know the world, knowing what is good and what is bad, using the tales they hear.

In fairy tales recommended for school-age children, the events are appropriate for the child's age. Children of this period go to school; they are self-sufficient as they read many books. Most of the fairy tales recommended for them need to be about their motherland, nature, ethics, work and study. „Emerald and costume, „ 1 tar v, ,,, eh ,,, ,,, eh eh „,bilan bilan bilan eh iq bilan lat lat lat lat lat lat lat lat lat lat lat lat The fairy tale, "The Wolf and the Goat" is a favorite book of little-school-age children.

Children of this age are more likely to like fairy tales, slander and hypocrisy. After all, little ones have learned through the fairy tales that a true, well-educated child should not hurt, be arrogant, look down on anyone, be honest. They know that a good child should be respectful of adults, kind and compassionate to the younger, smiling, kind, and kind. True, man keeps his promise, does not betray savings. Hypocrisy, slander, and hypocrisy prevail. She will honor her parents. He will be kind and loving to his relatives. He refrains from doing bad things, doing bad things, and doing anything wrong. These are beautiful children who are loved and respected by the people. Zumrad in fairy tale "Zumrad and Qimmat" is one of the characters with similar qualities.

In fairy tales recommended for middle-aged and older children, fairy tales should now encourage the child to think and encourage independent thinking. The fairy tales for preschool and junior high school can be seen above. As we have mentioned, it is small in size, simple in content and rich in paintings and paint. These fairy tales, which are offered to students of both groups, bring to their minds such things as nature, motherland, wildlife, honesty, good manners, respect for adults, and respect for little ones. the concepts.

"Pahlavon Rustam", "Struggle Three Brothers", "True to the Curve," which encourages courage, patriotism, good business, sacrifice for the people and the homeland for children of this age, "Mother Earth", "Sardar's wish to capture the moon" (Turkish folk fairy tale), "Snake-covered fairy tale", "wise girl" (Chinese folk fairy tale), mixes "(Swedish folk fairy tale)," Old men, bulls, turkeys and pop "(Georgian folk fairy tale).

There is a good example from our forefathers: A good life depends on a person. How honest, clever, organized, and pure he is; If he does not betray his friend or homeland, does not lie, fulfills his promise and fulfills his promise, the people will love him.

Anyone who is cruel and arrogant will one day be punished for it. As history has shown, how many powerful statesmen and powers have over time been overwhelmed by the need and need, but on the contrary, the hard work and humanity of the poor and the poor. We see that happiness, fortune, wealth, and wealth are the result.

Yes, there is a great and honorable way in life for children. This path should not be misled or erred. This is the path of humanity. He who follows it will always be happy. It gives people spiritual strength and leads people to the truth. It is also a human duty to live for the good of the people, to do good and to respect the elders.

REFERENCES

- [1] The National Encyclopedia of Uzbekistan. Volume 7, 2004, Volume 8. State Scientific Publishing House
- [2] Abdukhali Mavkulov. Upbringing a spiritually mature person. - T.: Uzbekistan. 2008
- [3] Sodikova Sh.A. Preschool education. Tashkent: Science and Technology, 2012