Thanks to the independence of the Republic of Uzbekistan, the opportunity to study and restore historical, national and spiritual values in the context of socio-economic, cultural and educational changes. Problems of progress of society are being solved step by step. One of such problems is the radical renewal of the education of young people and the continuation of this process based on national historical experience.

The future of young people, the foundation of our future, depends largely on how they are educated today and on the social environment in which they live. In this respect, the teacher, the mentor, the parent and the general public are equally responsible for tomorrow's child.

The activities of family members and educators play an important role in the formation of high morals in the minds of preschool students. Because when family members, educators and children have such qualities as honesty, courtesy, humility, self-esteem, in a word, these exemplary moral qualities will have a positive effect on children. The child strives to honor his family and to do his duty conscientiously. Educators and parents encourage children to love their homeland, to work hard, to respect their parents and adults, to respect their younger children, to protect their brothers and sisters, to keep friends and to be loyal. They should be taught at an early age.

Labor has a broader meaning, which is based on nurturing attitudes about nature, social life, life and the profession. The content of early childhood preschooling includes such qualities as love for the motherland, kindness to others, and compassion for adults, diligence, and good judgment. As children are brought up with a sense of beauty, they are gradually beginning to share the joys of others, loyalty, sympathy, support, and compassion.

The noble ideas of the great Uzbek thinker, the great Uzbek thinker and scientist Alisher Navoi are not lost their value even today. The philosophical and moral considerations, wisdom and teaching in his work are universal in their importance and relevance. Navoi has called on all people to be good, cooperate, be kind regardless of their ancestry, be faithful to national traditions, and be diligent. Because,

“Make the world intelligent, Rejoice the people of the world by your behavior,” says Navoi

Building a new society based on free market economy is a difficult and difficult process. It should be built by people who live and work in this community, not by any foreign magician or expert. This cannot be achieved without changing the minds and perceptions of members of society, especially the youth who are the foundation of the future.

The caravans of our forefathers traveled the world, enjoyed a variety of products made by our people, brought in the products of other nations and made a significant contribution to the wealth of our country - wealth and wellbeing. At the same time various professions, agriculture were developed, and beautiful things and things were created.

Pre-school children are given a lot of attention and love. From an early age, children are taught the rules of behavior at home, on the street, in the garden, at the hotel, in the culture of communication, eating, dressing, dressing, being respectful, hardworking, and respecting the work of others. . These habits form the basis of the upbringing of a child who is morally and able-bodied.

The hand-drawn and shadowy plays of the so-called "doll game" have been used by our people for a long time. Although the puppets differ from each other by their puppet making, play, and tattoo design, the theme and the artistic nature of the performances, music plays an important role in each of the performances is similar to the puppet being seen by the audience while explaining the status of the heroes, and by means of the instrument, the sounds that match the heroes.

One of the heroes of the Uzbek traditional theatrical performance is "Polvon Kachal". The performances of Kachal Polvon as a representative of the working people were shown. The Kaval Kuchal puppet is basically handmade. Its head is made of wood, with a shirt, chapan, and skullcap on the head. He is described as a brave and powerful wrestler, unafraid of the devil, the devil and the dragon. The exterior has a nose and thick eyebrows. He participated in shows as a representative of the common people. These performances have been popular in the XIV century.

According to the sources, "The adventures and comedies of Polvon Kachal have come to us in various forms. Most comedies are of three types: in one is Polvon Kachal's love, dating, and marriage to a girl named Bichahon; the other is being robbed by his dog; the third is a collision. Polvon Kachal is also a funny character with a funny character. He is alive today, with his contradictions, positive and negative signs. He always overcame obstacles in his life, exposed bad officials and judges, defended justice and truth. «Based on many theatrical performances, the Uzbek Puppet Theater is socially exposed and humorous, with an important ideological and educational significance.

The educational value of labor traditions should not be underestimated. Because the establishment of the labor relations is the basis of upbringing the young generation. Preparing young people for life and participation in social work plays an important role in supporting labor traditions. Because the basis of labor traditions is moral qualities - hard work, love for the land and nature, not wasting water, generosity, value for every money, happiness through work, heroism. The social environment in the family plays an important role in the growth of love for children.

Labor has always been the basis for human life and prosperity. Labor is not only a source of personal prosperity, it is also a service to the nation, to the prosperity of the homeland and the growth of its might.

All living things live on by the consumption of something. From tiny insects on the ground, from underwater creatures to giant animals, it cannot survive without food. The life of a living creature in the workplace is rich. The great human being, known as "man," maintains his health, reputation, and future in the workplace.

The main factor of comprehensive development of the personality. Therefore, every child should be involved in the labor process from the preschool age. Every day in the kindergarten, in the family, should be a daily task for the child.

In order for the child to understand the importance and importance of the work, the educator will organize excursions to observe the work of adults and the types of work that children can do themselves.

Based on the advice of A. Makarenko to parents, a child should be well-educated before the age of five. Because at this time the child is fully thinking, and its external senses are extremely developed. Adults and parents in the family are good for the child, and the child imitates the adults and takes care of them. While the upbringing is based on family education, schooling is a natural extension of family upbringing. Similarly, a child should be educated in the family at an early age.

As for the psychological preparation of children for work, this should not be limited to work skills. The main goal is to instill a child's respect for any work. Teaching a child to work is not just a simple mechanical exercise, but it is also slowly explaining to a child that the work is a social phenomenon.
